

Sharing Your Story

“Your story is your life” says Jim Loehr, and it’s important to understand the power within your own story.

No one is quite like you, has your unique perspective, your personal attributes, or has lived your life, your story.

Sharing that story tells others who you are, what you stand for, what you offer, what brings you to your knees, what brings you to your feet. It expresses your personal vision, your purpose, and your point of view.

It provides insight into how you make your life and how you make your living. It captures what others most need to know, what is worth sharing.

How you tell your story is also important. It needs to be creative, expressive, honest, enlightening, interesting, and enduring; a true representation.

"Stories are the creative conversion of life itself into a more powerful, clearer, more meaningful experience. They are the currency of human contact.
